Re: Interim Note on Local Elections in Albania

As you know, on Sunday, May 8, 2011, the Republic of Albania, whose government our firm represents here in Washington, held nationwide local elections. While the counting of ballots continues in some close races, notably including in the capital of Tirana and in the port of Durres, to this point, they are proceeding in a fundamentally orderly fashion under international supervision. The final stages of counting may take a day or so longer. I am attaching an update we received yesterday from the Democratic Party of Albania.

As Jonathan Stonestreet, the head of the Election Observation Mission for Organisation for Security and Cooperation in Europe's Office for Democratic Institutions and Human Rights (OSCE/ODIHR), noted, "The local government elections were competitive and transparent." The Government of Albania's decision to welcome hundreds of election monitors from the OSCE and elsewhere helped to ensure the transparency of the elections.

Moreover, "The vote generally took place in a calm atmosphere," according to Hana Richtermocova, the head of the Council of Europe's delegation. No pre- or post-election loss of life has been reported so far, despite what Stonestreet aptly describes as "an environment of high polarization and mistrust between parties in government and opposition."

The success of the elections is a part of Albania's continued integration into European political, economic, and security institutions. The elections provide a way to break the political deadlock that has plagued the country for much of the past two years. Given those lingering tensions, we would welcome any statements you and your fellow Caucus members can make to encourage the orderly conclusion of the reporting of results. Furthermore, we hope that Caucus members will consider making floor statements commending Albania for holding generally successful elections that should help the country's integration into NATO and the European Union. Thank you in advance for your assistance, and please let us know how we can help you.
